HOUSING LAW

Catherine's housing practice spans the whole range of tenancy and housing matters, includes possession (anti-social behaviour, rent, breach of tenancy, tenancy status, sub-letting, succession, beneficial interests, public law), anti-social behaviour injunctions, unlawful eviction, and disrepair.

Catherine is regularly instructed in complex possession trials, especially those involving mental health issues, where she brings to bear her extensive knowledge of disability discrimination under the Equality Act 2010. She also acts and advises in the whole range of homelessness work, including county court appeals and claims for judicial review. She regularly advises and acts in cases where capacity is an issue including where the Official Solicitor has been appointed.

NOTABLE CASES

Lawal & Anor v Circle 33 Housing Trust[2014] EWCA Civ 1514

Save in exceptional circumstances an Article 8 defence ought to be raised during the possession proceedings and in particular at the trial. To raise an Article 8 argument at the enforcement stage, when it could and should have been raised earlier, will almost always be an abuse of process.

PROPERTY LAW

Catherine's practice spans constructive trusts, proprietary estoppel and TOLATA cases.

GENERAL CIVIL

Catherine has a varied general civil practice. She has experience in a range of cases involving Protection from Harassment Act injunctions, nuisance, trespass and negligence.

BACKGROUND

Catherine came to the Bar from the voluntary sector where she was a senior researcher at the Low Pay Unit and carried out extensive campaigning work for the introduction of the National Minimum Wage and for improved employment rights. She worked with a variety of organisations, including trade unions, the Low Pay Commission and the European Commission, on issues surrounding pay, working conditions, equality and child workers.

She also previously lectured in European Social Policy at Southbank University and University of Westminster.
