

Mediator Profile

Kate AUBREY-JOHNSON

Kate Aubrey-Johnson is the author of Making Mediation Work For You: a practical handbook (LAG, June 2012). Lord Woolf, former Lord Chief Justice, describes her “excellent book” as “breaking new ground... a book which is easy to understand and informs the reader, whether or not a lawyer, precisely what needs to be known about mediation in order that mediation can provide a solution.”

Kate has been an accredited mediator since 2007. She is an experienced mediator with a high settlement rate. Kate is an active member of the mediation community and has written widely on developments in mediation.

Areas of practice

Kate is available to mediate a wide variety of disputes, including:

- asset recovery and confiscation
- commercial property
- contractual disputes
- housing
- landlord and tenant
- licensing
- boundary disputes and anti-social behaviour
- community care
- employment and discrimination
- judicial review
- licensing
- planning
- public law
- special educational needs

Feedback digest:

An “excellent” mediator

- Miss F, long-running dispute between neighbours

Kate has a “relaxed style which puts parties at their ease ... her manner was very conducive to the parties reaching agreement”

- Ms P, property dispute

“Kate was well prepared and thoroughly responsive to both parties positions, arguments, needs and objectives. Through this responsiveness ... she was able to help procure a satisfactory settlement for both parties, therefore avoiding the need for the matter to proceed to trial”

- Mr S, solicitor, contractual dispute

Garden Court Mediation